Sexually transmitted infections (STIs) in Skagit County

Skagit County Public Health receives and investigates hundreds of reports of chlamydia, gonorrhea and syphilis each year.
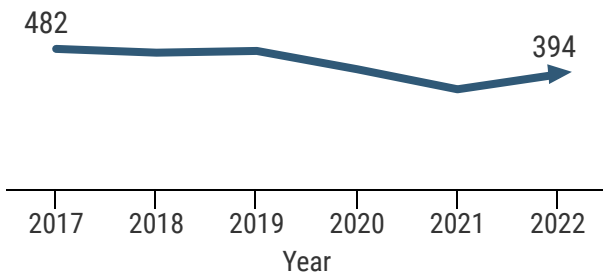

One in five people in the US have an STI*

Many STIs go undiagnosed because people may not develop symptoms right away or do not notice their symptoms. Individuals of all races, ethnicities and genders are impacted by STIs.
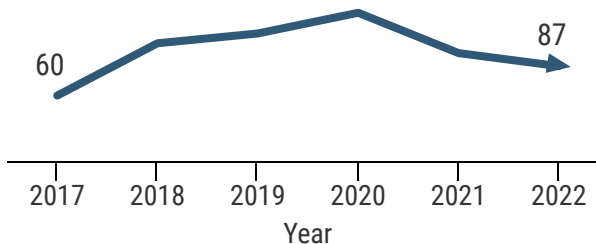

Sexually transmitted infections are serious when left untreated:

- Untreated chlamydia can lead to pelvic inflammatory disease and infertility in women.*
- Untreated gonorrhea can lead to pelvic inflammatory disease, infertility in men and women, and life threatening blood infection.*
- Untreated syphilis can lead to neurological complications and death. Pregnant individuals can pass infection to their unborn baby.*
