Your landlord is asking you to take part in the Eviction Resolution Program

What is the Eviction Resolution Program (ERP)?

Your county's Superior Court uses this program. ERP requires landlords to try to reach agreements with tenants about unpaid rent before they can ask for eviction in court.

If you participate in the ERP, your landlord must meet with you and a specialist from your local Dispute Resolution Center (DRC). If that solves the problem, great! If not, the DRC will offer free mediation. Mediation is voluntary – it only happens if both sides agree to do it.

You have the right to a payment plan that works for you. You can get help from a free lawyer if you are not sure what to do. (See page 2.)

Why should I participate now?

Failure to respond to this notice within 10 days may result in the filing of a summons and complaint for an unlawful detainer action with the court.

Do not wait! You can get help.

- Rent assistance
- Free mediation
- Free legal help

What is mediation? It is when a trained person (a mediator) helps you solve a problem or reach an agreement with someone else. You can ask for mediation at your local Dispute Resolution Center. Mediators are impartial and help all participants reach resolution.
